Taste of history

The Book of Settlement says that Irish monks were the first people to live here. Oral tradition says that the first church stood northeast of the meadow at Kirkjugólf (church floor), where striking basalt formations have come to the surface. A Benedictine convent was founded here in 1186, and lasted until the Reformation. It is the origin of the names Systrastapi (sisters' rock), Systravatn (sisters' lake) above the ridge, and Systrafoss (sisters' waterfall) above the farm. Jón Steingrímsson was the priest here during the Skaftáreldar eruptions in 1783, and he celebrated a famous mass during which the advancing lava halted in the bed of Skaftá river. A memorial chapel for Jón was built in 1974, and it stands near the old graveyard where his gravestone is found.

A scenic view of a glacier lagoon. In the foreground, several colorful kayaks (red, orange, and green) are parked on a dark, pebbly shore. The water is calm, reflecting the sky and the mountains. Numerous icebergs of various shapes and sizes float in the lagoon. In the background, a range of dark, jagged mountains rises under a blue sky with scattered white clouds. The overall atmosphere is serene and majestic.
