An aerial photograph of a coastal landscape. On the left, a river flows down a steep, reddish-brown rocky slope. To the right, a high cliff face is visible, characterized by prominent, vertically oriented, layered rock formations that appear to be part of a larger geological structure. The water in the river is a greenish-grey color. The top of the cliff is covered with sparse vegetation. The overall scene is a mix of natural geological features and a man-made waterway.
